KING OF BELGIUM MEETS DEATH

RIOT DISRUPTS PROTEST MEETING

CIVIL WAR IN AUSTRIA PROVINCE

BRUSSELS—King Albert I, the beloved hero-king of the Belgians, is dead—a victim of the sport of mountain climbing, which he loved so well.

Alone, he tried to climb a 200-foot cliff, the Rocher de Marches-Dames. The projecting knob of a stone broke off in his hand and the man who had climbed snow-capped mountain peaks plunged 26 feet to death. He passed away on the eve of the 25th anniversary of his accession to the throne—a throne which he occupied regally through the most terrible days of his country ever has known.

The late monarch was 58 years old and his son, Crown Prince Leopold, who will be crowned king on Friday of this week, is 32.

NEW YORK—A mass meeting called as a huge trade union, and socialist demonstration against the "slaughter of Austrian workers" turned into a bitter free-for-all fight between Bolshevik and Communist revolutionaries.

Bloes and yell, thumping feet and flying chairs filled the vast Madison Square Garden as groups of strategically placed Communists tried to keep up the meeting. One man was stabbed in the back, and three women and nine other men were beaten or struck with chairs. Two newspaper photographers were among the injured.

The general free-for-all threatened to become a riot of serious proportions when a slim figure, Clarence H. Hays, editor of the Communist Daily Worker, leaped onto the speakers' platform. Socialists on the platform seized him, rushed him off and beat him. He was pushed against a guard rail, this signal the Garden, with its 25,000 excited inhabitants, became a pandemonium. The platform itself, the hupahs and the balconies rising to the ceiling, became the scenes of innumerable fights.

SOUTHERN ALBERTA HOCKEY PLAYOFF GAMES

The Calgary Ranger-Drumheller minor hockey play-off games have attracted considerable attention. On Monday night a number of Carbon fans took in the game at Calgary and Drumheller won 3-1. In the second game of the series at Drumheller on Wednesday night the Miners again won 3-0, giving them the Southern Alberta senior championship, and they will play the northern section winners for provincial honors.

The game at Drumheller on Monday night was attended by a large number of Carbon fans and the Red Ives Lines ran a special bus down for the game, taking about 25 passengers.

If the weather holds out Swallow will hold its annual banquet commencing on Monday, February 24.

A couple of risks from Carbon usually take in the Swallowspiel every year and as it will probably be the last of its kind in the district this year, they anticipate a large entry.

WHAT ABOUT SOCIAL CREDIT, CANADA?

This series is an explanation of the Youngs Social Credit Plan. Mr. Williams (W) is a Social Credit advocate, is explaining the plan to his friend, Mr. Jones (J). The scene is Mr. Williams' home, and the conversation takes place during an evening visit.

(No. 4)

W. "Well, here is some more evidence that supports my contention that banks do not lend money. Listen to what the Right Honourable Reginald McKenna, Chairman of the Midland Bank, England, says: 'I am afraid that the ordinary citizen will not like to be told that the banks can, and do, create and destroy money. The amount of money in existence varies only with the action of the banks in increasing or decreasing deposits. When banks over/raise, or bank purchase creates a deposit, and every repayment of a loan over/raise or bank sale destroys a deposit.'

Hartley Withers (and you can't accuse him of being unorthodox in financial matters) says: 'A credit in the Bank of England's books is regarded by the financial community as "cash" and this pleasant fiction has given the bank the power of creating cash by a stroke of the pen and to any extent that it pleases, subject only to its own view as to what is prudent and sound business.'

You may not consider Professor Suda an authority in this line but at least he is worth quoting. He says: 'Is it possible in these days of disbeliever in physical miracles really pretend to lend money and do not lend it, but create it? And when it is repaid, they decrease it? And who have secured the physically impossible miracle thereby, not only getting something for nothing, but also of getting perpetual interest from it?' Of course Professor Suda is a physicist of Oxford

DISCUSS SECONDARY HIGHWAY AT GENERAL & ANNUAL MEETING OF MUNICIPAL DISTRICT CARBON

FUTURE NURSES MUST PASS ELEVENTH GRADE

Girls who intend to go in for nursing in Alberta in the future will be required to have grade 11 standing instead of grade 8 according to an amendment to the Registered Nurses Act now being introduced in the legislature. Some of the hospitals in the province already require the higher educational rating before accepting probationers.

University, and not a banker. "It is this true, how long has it been generally known?"

W. "It has never been generally known. Students of finance and banking have known it and accepted it as a common place fact for years as a business fact. It is in the district news this extract from H. D. McLeod's book, The Theory and Practice of Banking, which was written years ago and used as a text for young bankers. He wrote: 'The essential and distinctive feature of a bank and a banker is to create and issue credit payable on demand, and this credit is intended to be put into circulation and serve all the purposes of money. A bank therefore is not a place of borrowing and lending of money, but it is a manufacturing of credit. In the language of banking, a deposit of cash is the same thing.' And here is another paragraph from the same book: 'It is commonly supposed that a banker's profit is the difference between the interest he pays for the money he borrows and the interest he charges for the money he lends. The fact is that a banker's profit consists exclusively in the profits he can make by creating and issuing credit in excess of the specie he holds in reserve. A bank which issues credit only in exchange for money, never made and can by no possible means create, is a money lender, not a banker. It only creates and issues credit when it over/raises and issues credit in exchange for debts payable at a future time.'

J. "Well are you sure that this is accepted by orthodox authorities?"

W. "That is just what I have been quoting—orthodox authorities and practical bankers. I have purposely refrained from quoting Hays, Dudgeon or any Social Credit writer. But listen—You know the MacMillan Commission. Now the Canadian Commission but the larger body that sat in London a couple of years ago? Well, it had bank directors and prominent financial experts among its members. Listen to what the report says: 'It is not unusual to think of the deposits of a bank as being created by the public, through the deposit of cash representing either savings or amounts which are not for the time being required to meet expenditures of the bank. But the reality out of the actions of the banks themselves, for by granting loans, allowing money to be drawn on an overdraft, or purchasing securities a bank creates a credit in its books, which is the equivalent of a deposit.'

J. "Well, for Peter's sake! I thought that a bank was a place where people took any spare cash and left it on deposit in a savings account and then when the bank used these deposits to lend to producers to finance their operations. The difference between what the bank paid as interest on the savings deposits and what it received from the borrower, I took to be the source of the profit. This is certainly a revelation to me. But that is all about the British system. Are you sure that Canadian banking is like that?"

W. "I have been wondering if you would ask that, and that is why I have been digging around these shelves looking for this little book. It was written by Professor MacMillan of the University of Alberta. The date is 1924. He says: 'As a matter of fact, the bank does not lend money to its customers but a substitute, the bank's own credit.' Now I admit that I have not quoted so many authorities in Canada. The reason is that there have been fewer books published in Canada on the subject of banking."

1934 Assessment Will Be Same as Was in Past Three Years

ANNUAL MEETING DRAWS CROWD

The regular meeting of the Municipal District of Carbon was held in the municipal office, Carbon, on Saturday, February 17th, at 10 a.m. All council members were present and the regular routine business of the municipal district was transacted.

A communication from the Assessment Commission at Edmonton was received which stated: "Under authority of Sec. 84 of the Alberta Assessment Commission Act, by order-in-council dated Jan. 8, 1934, the period of four years has been substituted for a period of three years, during which the equalized assessment commencing Jan. 1, 1931, shall continue."

This means that there will be no new assessment in the Municipal District of Carbon this year, and that the same assessment as now appearing on the assessment roll, will apply for the year 1934.

The road question was discussed and a motion was made for a road running from the service station south of Carbon on No. 9 highway, to connect at a point north and west of Carbon at the highway. An amendment to the motion was made by Mr. McEwen, for the road to start at the same point, but in place of going west of Carbon, turn east for three miles and continue north to the boundary of the municipality. The amendment was lost and the original motion carried.

GENERAL MEETING OF MUNICIPAL DISTRICT OF CARBON

The annual general meeting of the Municipal District of Carbon No. 278, was held in the Masonic Hall, Carbon, on Saturday afternoon commencing at 1 p.m. and a large number of interested taxpayers was present.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and the financial statement of the municipality for the year 1933 was gone over and discussed to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Mr. Whitford of the Alberta Department of Agriculture was present and addressed the meeting on the subject of the grasshopper pest. He stated that this year grasshopper pest would be supplied by the provincial government to the municipality. It was recommended that bait be put out when the temperature was between 70 and 90 degrees. The bait was to be put out half was between 7 and 10 o'clock in the morning, when young grasshoppers began to appear. This bait would be applied on the middle of May and the early part of June.

Following this address, a full discussion took place on the proposed secondary highway through the municipality and a motion was put to the meeting that the ratemakers favor the amendment to the motion made by Mr. McEwen at the previous council meeting in the morning. The motion was lost.

A suggestion was made that the municipal District of Carbon do a little more road dragging this year than they have in the past, and not with approval by many of the ratemakers. At the close of the meeting Mr. T. J. King moved a vote of thanks to the 1933 council for the business-like way in which they conducted the affairs of the municipality during the past year.

Following the annual meeting, nominations were received for the office of councillors, and there will be an election in Division five only this year. In this division Richard S. Neer was nominated to run against Hector H. Crowell, and the election will be held on Saturday, February 24th.

COMMUNITY AUCTION SALE

R. N. Wright, Auctioneer, will hold a community auction sale in Carbon about March 10th, of livestock, household goods, farm implements, etc. Any one wishing to enter articles in the sale is asked to have their list in the hands of either Mr. Wright or Mr. S. P. Turcotte on or before March 1st.

"When we first met married my wife and I contracted for a year about whether we should buy an automobile or a horse and buggy."

"How did you settle it?"

"We compromised on a baby carriage."

"Yes, Robert, 'am' is the Latin word meaning 'I love.' Now what would suggest its opposite?"

"Remo."

MIKEW GIVES REASONS FOR DESERTING GOVERNMENT

EDMONTON—Peter A. Mikew, Liberal, Victoria, Tuesday afternoon held the spotlight in the legislature when, in speaking in the debate on the speech from the throne, outlined his reasons for bolting the U.F.A. party and joining the ranks of the Liberals. Failure of Premier Brownlie to reorganize and supplement his cabinet was the main reason advanced by Mr. Mikew.

"This government has been in power for 18 years and practically no change in the cabinet," he said. "Because of this a number of the honorable ministers have lost touch with the people of Alberta and no longer represent their wishes of those of the U.F.A. The prime minister has placed the private interests of some of his ministers above the interests of the people. It is out of sympathy for them, and not for lack of able men that he has failed the people of Alberta in this regard," Mr. Mikew declared.

"The present administration," he said, "through its inaction and drift and because of its evasiveness toward taking a stand on the major issues of the day, has been responsible for the breaking up of the U.F.A. organization, which is now composed of three elements, the extreme radicals, known as the H. H. Lutz on United Front who were one-time supporters of the U.F.A.; the less radical or dissatisfied groups who have become the exponents of the C.P.P., and lastly, a greatly reduced number of the U.F.A. who still believe in the principles laid down by that organization prior to 1931."

"This government no longer represents the interests nor does it stand for the principle of the farmers' organization in Alberta, which has been responsible for electing this government to office."

It has been reported that the depot at Grainer was broken into on Tuesday night of this week, but thieves gained little reward for their effort.

SYNOPSIS

Camilla Hoyt and Peter Anson, young and in love, marry secretly, deciding to live their own lives apart. Peter is a young, well-to-do sculptor trying to win a competition for a scholarship abroad and Camilla is the adopted daughter of a wealthy family. She is not to inherit money when she comes of age, and so is studying commercial art in the hope of landing an agency job. Others in the story are: Avis West, another wealthy girl who is trying to win Peter; Sylvia Todd, Peter's model, and Gus Matson, his former roommate with whom he has quarrelled. At a party at an exclusive club Peter entertains Camilla's guests with impromptu remarks. When the rest of the members of the party go to a cabaret to continue the feast, Peter and Camilla slip off and fall asleep on the sand. When they awake it is early morning and Avis and another girl are standing near the door. This makes it necessary for Camilla to announce before the party that she and Peter are married. Avis is stunned and Camilla's mother likewise. Camilla decides that she must leave the home of her adopted parents immediately and go to live with Rose, her sister, who is a file clerk in a business house. They decide to take an apartment. Bowman and Weston, an advertising agency, where Camilla has submitted some of her work, send for her and tell her they have a new account which requires unusual treatment of juvenile art. To Camilla's surprise she learns that the account is that of her foster father's company, which has decided on an extensive campaign to bolster up lagging business. After a conference with Mr. Bowman, Camilla decides to attempt the work. With ideas running riot in her head she goes home and spends the night sketching. In the morning, armed with her sketches, she sets out for the agency.

(Now the On With the Story)

CHAPTER XXXX

It was a question which girl had received the sudden announcement of Peter's marriage with more disappointment and amazement. Avis or Sylvia? To Avis, however, it was merely another obstacle in her path toward her ambition. To Sylvia, it prefigured a certain finality for the two possibilities she had envisioned, and for which she had been playing a double hand. As she explained to her astonished image when she read the announcement in the society column of the morning paper. "Well for crying at the moon! Who woulda thought they could feel everyone like that? Um, um, I guess that's the way you look at it. I'll bet the high and mighty Avis West feels like a pucker up green apple, herself."

The scolding of the telephone left interrupted her monologue. "Um! The green apple, herself, I'll bet."

"Yeah, hello," she drawled, and nodded her head with confirmation toward her silent audience of one, in the mirror.

"You've seen the latest news?" inquired Avis.

"I just read it, and as if you read my mind, the phone rings. I guessed it was you right away."

"Clever of you, I'm sure. But you haven't been so clever with Mr. Anson as you expected to be."

"Well, and isn't this good enough proof of the reason why? I was a bride—what would you expect of me with such competition as that? I guess it surprised even you, didn't it? Not much chance for either of us, there."

"Either of us?" surprised.

"Well, you know what I mean. No chance for me to vump him away from the Hoyt girl so you could take him over in sympathy; and she, she's got it. "Fine chance what? I had a had at him if I had got that far!"

"I don't know why?"

"You don't mean you're not ready to give him up yet?"

"Why should I? Just because a man is married doesn't mean that he's chained to a life sentence, does it? In fact, this particular situation makes it easier to break up. But I'll take the affair into my own hands."

"But, say," Sylvia objected, "I guess I wish my work for him, even if he's married. I wouldn't be so mean as to cheat a fellow like that when he's done nothing to me. Besides, I have some pride in the ability of my profession, and my reputation. Models don't desert an employer in the middle of a piece of work."

"Just yourself about that," Sylvia agreed indignantly, "but you aren't worried about quitting me in the middle of a piece of work. I won't leave you any longer, and if you see a new tenant in Annex Hall, don't recognize me."

"I may with it," Sylvia retorted. "I'll be in the Annex Hall, for two studios in the Annex Hall, for all I care."

"By the way, you will be wise if you drop your efforts to attract Mr. Anson."

"Say, I'm only too glad not to be under obligation to think up new ways for throwing out that fellow, as she retorted, but her blue eyes twinkled with the thought. "Being under obligation no more, let's risk it. But I guess if he is still ripe for cherries for you, he is for me, too, your highness!"

But when Sylvia went to Peter's studio on the following day to pose, she experienced a new and kinder interest in the man and his work. She twisted him in her character-study manner.

"So! young man, you've been married for a while, is that so?"

"Yes, I'm a bachelor, and all the time you were a married man, with a trusting wife concerned in your private life."

"Well, I guess I've given you cause for complaint," he laughed easily.

"I'll say you have," she admitted. "But say, I'd like to see the girl that stirred you up enough to lead you to the marriage license bureau and then keep it a secret."

"You may, any time you wish. I'll have Camilla run in some day and meet you. She would like to, I'm sure."

"Camilla—well name. Is she as beautiful as her name sounds?"

"Ever so much more beautiful!" he declared proudly.

Sylvia reflected upon that with haste. "More beautiful than I am?"

"I wouldn't say that—no. But your types are so different, I couldn't compare you. She is about your size, but has dark eyes and black hair."

"Then I was wasting my time, anyway," she shrugged with good humor. "I might have known a blond gentleman like you would prefer a blond to a brunette. Well, good luck to you two, and that means we had better get to work."

"Thanks, yes, it does," Peter replied. "I have to get this thing ready to cast the mold in another week, or I won't be ready for the exhibit, after all."

Several days later, when Sylvia came again to Peter's studio, she observed that the hall was strewn with crates and boxes. "Someone moving in across the hall?" she asked him.

"Looks like it, doesn't it?"

"Well, it'll be nice to have near neighbors. You're sort of alone up at this end of the hall."

"That's why I took this room. That is and this twice as much rent, and I didn't think it was likely to be occupied very soon."

"Have'n't the slightest idea. Nor do I care. I am going to be so busy for next month that I can't even say hello to anyone."

"Oh, yeah?" thought Sylvia. "Well, they might say more than hello to you," but she said no more to Peter.

When Camilla telephoned Mr. Bowman on the morning after her first conference with his executives, and announced that she had accepted ready to submit to him, he exclaimed with dismay and disappointment.

"But, Miss Hoyt, surely you haven't what I mean, I want you to take your time, even though we are anxious to have your suggestions as soon as possible."

"That was what I understood," she agreed patiently, "and they are ready now."

"Very well. We shall be glad to see them whenever you can come in." But his voice indicated that he expected to be keenly disappointed because no one could produce a worthwhile suggestion and the evidence within less than twenty-four hours.

Camilla, however, arranged the precious ink and color drawings in the order she wished to display them and drove downtown confidently. The two hours of sleep had refreshed her unbelievably, and the inspiration of the previous day still made her heart light and her thoughts hopeful.

Of course, she concealed the possibility that the work was not as good as she believed it to be, but she was no less eager for the verdict of her judges.

She even detected a less cordial attitude in Mr. Bowman's greeting, she thought. Or was it only her imagination? He appeared already to feel the disappointment which he anticipated in her hasty work.

After all, he thought, like every young hopeful, the prospect had stimulated her imagination and she had leaped into the first idea that came to her, with visions of sudden fame and wealth. That was what everyone was looking for these days—being less an elevator to success and wealth. Ladders to success were obsolete, along with one-horse teams and collared collars.

Mr. Bowman had called a second conference with less optimism, and Camilla found herself once more seated at his right, with six men surrounding the polished walnut table. Her fingers trembled a little with fatigue or apprehension—as she opened the portfolio and laid out drawing before them.

"Perhaps I had better explain the idea briefly before you look at them," she suggested modestly.

"Very well, Miss Hoyt."

Acquiring Knowledge

Newspaper Should Be Read Like Book, States Chatham Judge

Justice McPhaden of Chatham, Ontario, always has something worth while when he makes a public address, says the Border Cities Star.

Speaking to a group in Chatham, His Honor discussed the important subject of reading, saying, among other things that newspapers should be read like a book, with due concentration, in order to absorb valuable information. If people would read their newspapers properly, Judge McPhaden observed, they would be well posted, well educated in fact.

He was particularly impressed with this paragraph from our report of His Honor's address: "We read for two main purposes—to acquire knowledge and for pleasure. It should be a pleasure to acquire knowledge, but this means work and to many persons work is never a pleasure."

As Judge McPhaden says, it should be a pleasure to acquire knowledge, yet all so many persons who have plenty of natural ability, never seem to get this point of view. His remarks provide valuable food for thought.

DECISION

How good to see the way, to know the path. Wherein I shall this hour meet my fate.

How good to leave behind the doubt, the strife. And all the ill that mingles of defeat!

No wonder groping long through shadowy Black caves, down chambers echoing and cold.

Can glimpses of daylight, thrill with joy so profound. A rupture when he sees the sun's rays gleam.

Upon the mists, hovers the larva's dream. At this day I, who have arrived at last.

At the sure boundary of a massive wall. Which shuts me out from all the barren past.

How good to know that I, who still have breath. Have gained a barrier absolute at last.

Necessity of Research

Specialists Working On Problems Should Get In Touch With The Practical Man

Speaking of the danger to agricultural research in that the specialist may become so fascinated with the intricacies of the problem that he neglects the end to which his researches are directed, Sir A. Danial Hall told the Canadian Society of Technical Agriculturists that those directing research should try to ensure that all the workers made contacts with the practical man.

"It is inevitable," he said. "It is inevitable; and we cannot get the best work done, and we cannot solve or even get an appreciation of many of the difficult problems that are before us unless we have such specialists, each at liberty to go on working in his own way, and pursuing his particular bent to the utmost."

But we can do something to make these people human? In order to do that, let us try to ensure that they have contacts with agriculture itself."

Naïveté Horse Shoe

Robert A. Campbell, of Griffin, Sask., has taken it on himself to decree what the well-dressed horse will wear in the spring of 1933 and there after. He claims to have invented a "naïveté" horse shoe, which has already interested United States capitalists.

Whether the new shoe is bolted, laced, glued or screwed to the horse's hoof was not disclosed by the inventor.

O Lord, my best desires fulfill And help me to resign Life, health, and comfort to Thy

And make Thy pleasure mine—Win, O God, my crown.

What do thy pleasurable pains prove but that other things are sweeter to us than His will, that we have not attained to the full mastery of our true freedom, the full perception of its power, that our worship is not yet realized, and its blessedness not yet proved and known. Our conduct reveals turn all our brains into obedience. By consenting we make them our own, and offer them with capillary order issued by the public safety bureau, which describes them as "the flesh of animals possessing many of the traits of man, and also a considerable amount of intelligence, and, therefore should no longer be used for human food."

A Scotch professional golfer, after fourteen years of retirement, has resumed the game. Evidently he found his ball.
